YieldMax™ ETFs, one of the fastest growing ETF families in the United States[1], with the most diverse offering of option income funds, announces the launch of its first UCITS ETF for investors in Europe, in partnership with HANetf.

The YieldMax Big Tech Option Income UCITS ETF (ticker: YMAG)

YMAG Investment Strategy

YMAG is an actively managed UCITS ETF that seeks to generate monthly income from a portfolio of covered call strategies, each on a US-listed technology stock. The covered call strategy is a widely used income strategy that relies on the sale of options to harvest income from the volatility of a stock, including those that offer small or no dividends of their own.

YMAG aims to generate monthly income from the sale of US-listed call options on US-listed technology stocks. It also seeks to capture capital growth through exposure to the share price returns of those same technology stocks.

YieldMax™ ETFs

YieldMax™ ETFs is a leader in option-based income ETFs in the United States[2], with a suite of over 40 ETFs that have accrued over USD 9 billion in assets under management. YieldMax™ ETFs cover a broad range of underlying assets and option-based income strategies. The YieldMax™ ETFs trading and portfolio management team has 18 professionals possessing decades of option trading expertise.

YieldMax™ ETFs has partnered with white-label ETF specialist HANetf for the launch of its first actively managed UCITS ETF. The YieldMax™ Big Tech Option Income UCITS ETF is initially listed
